My dear Spinster Sister, —
Dear Edith, —

I suppose you will be greatly surpised to hear from me but as we are not very busy this morning thought I might improve the time by writing to the new bride. You certainly surprised us all by getting married. When I got home the evening you sent the announcement, Emily was dancing around in an excitable manner and says you can't guess who's married and of course I mentioned a dozen different names but never once gave an old Spinster like you a thought for I of course thought you had given the views of matrimony up some years ago. But hope Dear Edith that you will be good and kind to your dearly beloved and that he will be the same to you. As you know its a matter of better or worse. And I trust yours is for the better as you certainly deserve a good husband.

We made up a box and sent it to you about two weeks ago. I know you will enjoy a good laugh when you discover the contents of course we thought you would find them very handy some day and hope you will appreciate the thought of them being your dear brother Eachie's I suppose Archies has written you all about his new home he certainly has a very pretty one and is taken great interest in it He is on his vacation at present and all his time is engaged about the new home. Of course not forgetting the boy who follows his father's foot steps all over the house. I tell you Edith they are a pair it is really laughable, to see them together at times. Poor Mother has not been very well the last few days having suffered from her old nervous attacks which leaves her most miserable. Well Dear Edith will have to say Good Bye as we are getting rather busy hoping my letter will find you both enjoying good health. With Love from your Spinster Sister May Lavey.

P.S. Archie has been looking for a letter from you stating whether you received the Pkge or not. Let us know at once!
